BUILT BY CROZET

Part of the C. and O. the Work of Mapeleon's Engineer.

Colonel C. B. Hyan of the C. and O tells of an interesting fact about a part of the roadbod of that read between here and Washington City.

It seems that recently Purchasing Agent George W. Stevens of the Q. and C. was making a trip between here and the National Capital in company with President Ingalls of the C. and O.

President Ingalls, while the train was making the run over that part of the line in the Blue Ridge regions, declared that the roadbod for quite a distance was gineer during the rule of the French Emperor, whose downfell led to the present French Republic.

It seems that after Napoleon III fell, his adbrents drifted to various parts of the world and Croset came to America. He was an experienced engineer, and was in charge of the construction of parts of the old Virginia Central Railway roadbed, over which the C. and O. now yuns for a good distance.

"This roadbed," said Colonel Ryan, "is as solid as a rock, and shows with what cree Croset builded. He was a fermous engineer—was the directing power in all of the great works carried on under Napoleon III, but it seems strange that he should build a railway roadbed in this country and so few people know of the fact."

In the midst of life we are in debt. If you owe Tits Lensent anything we'll be of the proper was the directing proposed and the contraction of the contraction of the proper was the directing power in all of the great works carried on under Napoleon III, but it seems strange that he should build a railway roadbed in this country and so few people know of the fact."
